Art Rejections:

1. The texts of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) cited in the previous office action are hereby incorporated by reference.

2. The rejection of claims 1-36 under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over \underline{Ng} et al, U.S. pat. No. 6,131,096, mailed March 23, 2010, is hereby incorporated by reference.

Response to Amendment:

3. Applicant's arguments filed on June 23, 2010 with respect to claims 1-36 have been fully considered but they are not deemed persuasive.

Applicant alleges that \underline{Ng} fails to disclose the claimed invention because \underline{Ng} does not teach the first and second devices using the \underline{same} interface. Applicant asserts that even though both first and second devices may use web-based interfaces, it does not necessarily mean that they have the same interfaces.

The examiner disagrees. The examiner submits that the present specification does not clearly describe the alleged "same" interface, i.e., as to which degrees the interfaces are considered to be the same. On the other hands, user interfaces of the same type, i.e., web-based, window-based, text-based, etc., are generally considered in prior art as to be the same.

More particularly, the present specification discloses, in page 6, lines 13-17, a first embodiment in which both the server and client device having the same web-based interfaces. The present specification discloses, in page 20, lines 3-5, an alternate embodiment in which the server may not have a web-based interface. Thus, it appears from the specification, the "same" interface refers to same type of interface. Accordingly, examiner's interpretation of the "same" interface being same type of interface is indeed consistent with prior art and the present disclosure.
